MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 1.

A TRIBUTE TO THE DOCTORS. -Mr. Gladstone was a guest at the recent dinner of the British Medical Association. In acknowledging the compliment of a toast to "Her Majesty's Minis-Mr. Gladstone paid a high, but not undeserved tribute to the medical profession. He said that but for the care and watchfulness of a succession of able physicians it would have been impossible for him to have gone through the fatigues of political life. "It is," he proceeded, "among the mournful and noble distinctions of your illustrious profession that, although its members may not receive that acknowledgement which awaits the soldier when he falls on the battle field, yet they are to be found in countless numbers among the truest martyrs in the cause of humanity." He complimented the practitioners of the medical art on their high claims to consideration for their promotion of beneficial sanitary legislation. He said that medical knowledge has advanced in recent years in a degree which is not, perhaps, paralleled in any other profession. There is at the present day "a greater and more sustained carnestness of purpose, and a more general exaltation of the aims of medical meu.'

Mr. Gladstone said in conclusion: "This age is distinguished by an unbounded activity in all the sciences of observation. Of all those sciences yours is the noblest. It is given to you to study the relations between the wonderful soul and mind of man. You tread that border land in which the two come in contact. It is very easy to describe the post-office or the railway system, but you have to deal with a thing far more subtle when you attempt to grasp human nature as a whole. Human progress is not to be described by formularies. It is only by the most patient observation that a sound and comprehensive knowledge on such a subject can be acquired. To you it belongs to seize the great opportunities and to accept the friends wanting ground bone, bone dust or any great responsibilities which attach to the prolession of which you are members, and to show yourselves worthy of the great vocation with which you are entrusted."

GARTERS. - Here is something from the Book of Beauty that is strictly local here or anywhere else. Women should read it:

"A handsome leg is a rarity, we had almost said an impossibility, among American women. The reason of this is the place where they wear the garters. No French woman, no English woman of cultivation, no-a-days wears her garters below her knees. It is ruinous to the shape of the calf. More than this, it has serious con-sequences of another kind. The principal vein of the leg, vena saphrenabrevis, runs just beneath the skin until it nearly reaches the knee, when it sinks between the muscles. Now, if this is constructed at its largest point by a tight garter, the blood is checked in its return to the heart, the feet are easily chilled, and more liable to disease; the other veins of the leg are swollen into hard, blue knots, become varicose, as it is called, and often break, forming obstinate ulcers. This is a picture which a physician sees nearly every day. With the garter fastened above the knee all this pain and deformity is avoided, but it is still better to wear no garter at all, and to suspend the stockings by tapes around the waist. In this case, however, a well fitting stocking is needed.'
